[Correspondence of the London Daily News]
An Old Reprobate of Sixty.

At the Assize Court of the Isere, on March 21st, was tried for the murder of his own daughter, and the attempted murder of her lover, a criminal of no ordinary stamp. Benjamin Reynaud, the culprit, a man sixty-six years of age, with snow-white hair and beard, a man of education, respectable position and easy fortune; is not a Brutus thinking with barbarous virtue to wipe out the pollutions of a Tarquin by immolating his own flesh and blood, but a hoary lecher who killed his daughter from the vile motive that she was cognizant of his having been laughed at by one of his mistresses. This M. Reynaud went in early life to the Isle Saint Denis de la Reunion, where he became receiver of stamps and taxes—a post of much consideration in the colony.

In that colony he married, had five children, and I've for many years much respected. He returned to France a few years ago, and settled in a country house at Clary, near Grenoble. His wife found the residence too dull, and without any positive quarrel, although she knew her husband was guilty of many infidelities, soon left him to return to the colony, where she had married daughters. One of the daughters, Madame Gardilanne, a lady of free and easy manners, separated from her husband in consequence of a scandal the circumstances of which are not explained, and came to live with her father in France. That she to his knowledge, had a lover prior to the one whom the father attempted to assassinate, was distinctly proved on the trial. He, a Lehar of three score years and upwards, notoriously intrigued with all the women in the neighborhood whom he could influence by money social position, or by that moral ascendancy which, notwithstanding his age, he appears to have been able to exercise for immoral purposes.

One of his mistresses was a young married lady, a Madame Baudrand, the wife of a notary. This Madame Baudrand, after becoming much against the grain and with frequent remorse and repugnance, the mistress of the father, was also the confidential friend of the daughter, and knew of her liaison with M. Lobinhes, a young receiver of stamp duties, who had come into that part of the country. It happened one day, as M. Reynaud was expecting a letter from Madame Baudrand to give him a rendezvous, a letter from her to his daughter, Madame Gardilanne, came to his house, when the latter was out, and the father took upon himself to open it. In that letter he found himself described as the "old one" (le vieux) whom she, Madame Baudrand, would contrive to get away for three or four nights, and she recommends Madame Gardilanne to make the best use of the opportunity to see her lover, M. Lobinhes, of whom she was so very fond.

Hereupon Reynaud, as he admitted on the trial, formed the deliberate resolution of murdering his daughter and her lover, and killing himself. He left his house, saying that he would be absent for three or four days. At the village of St. Marcellin he bought a brace of pistols, which he loaded, and a poignard. He wrote a letter to his wife at Reunion, to one of his married daughters, and to a son who lives in England telling them of his intention to commit the double murder and suicide. He fixed upon the notary and advocate who were to wind up his affairs after his death. Having deliberately made all these dispositions, he returned in the dusk of the evening to his own house, where he found his daughter in the drawing room. Not seeing her lover with her, he observed that he had probably arrived too soon, but he could wait.

He then laid down the pistol and poignard upon a chest of drawers, and coolly told her that he had brought the arms there to use them, that one of the pistols was for M. Lobinhes, the poignard for her, and the other pistol for himself. M. Lobinhes, who was concealed in an adjoining room, heard the conversation and rushed out. He asked for pardon, remonstrated with Reynaud, and urged him not to commit a dreadful act which he would afterwards bitterly repent of. Reynaud said, "I grant you no pardon; take a pen." The young man took a pen, and was asked to write—"I admit myself to be an infamous suborner." He threw the pen down, and declared that nothing would induce him to write it. Reynaud then threatened to fire. "Give me a moment," said the young man, "let me say one prayer." A moment's hesitation ensued after this appeal, and Lobinhes rushed to the window and jumped out, but while he was jumping, Reynaud fired and wounded him.

A moment after he stabbed his daughter in three places, plunging the poignard up to the hilt, and leaving her on the floor speechless and dying. He then fired the remaining pistol into his own mouth, and the ball carried away a portion of his upper jaw, but without inflicting a mortal or even very serious wound. Meanwhile, Lobinhes returned up stairs, and seeing that Madame Gardilanne was in her last moments, thought of nothing but endeavoring to administer to her some religious consolation. In a few moments she breathed her last, and the wretched father, when he saw her with her bosom bared and dead, exclaimed, "she was a beautiful girl, and a charming mistress."

For this enormous crime a Grenoble jury has found extenuating circumstances; grounded, I suppose, on the bona fides of the attempt at suicide; and as the French law does not allow hard labor to be inflicted upon a man above sixty, the sentence is only simple imprisonment for life. Mme. Baudrand, Reynaud's last mistress, is missing, and it is feared that she has committed suicide rather than appear at the trial.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES ON THE REVOLUTION.—Mr. Alexander Stephens has been at Richmond, as already announced. His mission there was to sow the seeds of disunion in Virginia; and how well he succeeded is already known. He is a remarkable man, is Mr. Stephens. Not very long ago he was glorifying over the fact that the Confederate States constitution was based on that most monstrous of crimes—human slavery; and now he has been delivered of another ovation of a most remarkable kind. One would almost fancy Mr. Vice-President Stephens had had communication with the spirit land. He said:

"The law of necessity and of right compelled us to act as we did. He had reason to believe that the Creator smiled on it. The Federal flag was taken down without the loss of a single life. He believed that Providence would be with us and bless us to the end. We had appealed to the God of Battles for the justness of our cause. Madness and folly ruled at Washington. Had it not been so, several of the States would have been in the old Union for a year to come. The gods first made mad those they would destroy. Maryland would join us, and may be, ere long, the principles that Washington fought for might be again administered in the city that bore his name. Every son of the South, from the Potomac to the Rio Grande, should rally to the support of Maryland. If Lincoln quits Washington as ignominiously as he entered it, God's will will have been accomplished. The argument was now exhausted. Be prepared; stand to your arms; defend your wives and treasures. He alluded to the momentous consequence of the issue involved. Rather than be conquered, let every second man rally to drive back the invader. The conflict may be terrible, but the victory will be ours. Virginians, said he, you fight for the preservation of your sacred rights—the land of Patrick Henry—to keep from desecration the tomb of Washington, the graves of Madison, Jefferson, and all you hold most dear."

THE SOUTH REALIZING A FACT.—The Southern people are just opening their eyes to the spectacle of a united North. Here is what the Richmond Examiner says on the subject:

Of all the execrable spots on the American continent, the city of New York bears off the palm. Sodomy, to which on account of its horrible profligacy of morals, it has often been likened, had in it at least one man who stood by his principles amid an unclean and accursed generation. If New York has one, he has not the courage to let his voice be heard. We could not have believed, nothing could have persuaded us that the city of New York, which had been enriched by Southern trade, and had ever professed to be true to the Constitution and the South, would in one day be converted into our bitterest enemy, panting for our blood, fitting out fleets and armies, and raising millions for our destruction. It seems to us incredible—impossible; we can scarcely believe, even now, that a whole community can, with one consent, be transformed from men to devils, and all because Fort Sumter, a fort in a Southern harbor, was deprived by Southern citizens, without spilling a drop of blood, of its power to assail and destroy an innocent and unoffending people.

Firing on the American flag, and seizing United States forts and navy yards, appear to be considered a very innocent and harmless amusement in the South.

GRAVE WAGGERS.—The following epitaph was suggested for the tombstone of Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of George III.:

Here lies Fred,
Who was alive, and is dead.
Had it been his father,
I had much rather;
Had it been his brother,
Still better than another.
Had it been his sister,
No one would have missed her;
Had it been the whole generation,
Still better for the nation;
But since 't is only Fred,
Who was alive, and is dead,
There's no more to be said.

THE NEW YORK ASTOR HOUSE.—When the Massachusetts agent sent to Stetson for his bill against that State, he received the following reply:

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK,) April 27, 1861.)
Gov. Andrew, Massachusetts—Dear Sir:
The Astor House has no charge for feeding Massachusetts troops.

Yours, respectfully,
STETSON & CO.
A most liberal discount was also made by the steamship companies for the transportation of troops.

[From the New York Herald.]
McCarty's New and Powerful Cannon.

An exhibition of a new and unique cannon took place, yesterday afternoon, at the foot of Thirty-third street, North river. It is one of the most singular implements of war that has ever been exhibited to the American people, and places Winans' gun entirely in the shade, sending balls at the rate of four hundred and eighty per minute, without any powder or an apparent effort. The gun used yesterday in the experiment had only an inch bore and was about three feet long. This modest looking gun is attached to a wheel, about four feet in diameter, and not over four inches thick, looking like a flange, or, as some would call it, a balance wheel. On one side of this wheel or flange is a tube which connects the wheel with a hopper in which are poured the balls, in a promiscuous manner, as apples are thrown into the hopper of a cider mill, the machinery inside the wheel receiving the balls, carrying them around to the gun barrel, and throwing them through the bore of the gun, at the rate mentioned above, simply by the centrifugal force, at a velocity almost incredible.

The motion of the wheel is kept up by means of cranks attached to cog wheels, about five feet in the rear of the large wheel or feeder to the gun barrel, a band passing from these wheels to a pulley on the side of the large wheel. The gun that we saw in operation, using one inch balls, was worked by six men at the cranks as motive power, one as feeder, pouring out the balls into the hopper, and the inventor of the gun in the rear of all, taking aim and shifting the gun at will from one direction to another. With the power got up in this way, balls poured out of the gun in a perfect stream, and it appeared as though one continuous shower was being hurled against the target, stationed about fifty yards distant, most of them going through three thicknesses of boards. The gun was afterwards raised at an angle of thirty degrees, and its capacity as to distance tested. The river at the foot of thirty-third street is about one and three-fourths of a mile wide. The gun was stationed some distance back from the shore, and the balls were seen to drop into the water among the shad poles towards the west side of the Hudson, at the lowest estimate one mile from the starting point, and all this by centrifugal force, or the arrangement of the machinery to use this throwing off power.

When the machinery is put in motion it sounds like a thrashing machine and has a like hum about it. The only report about its firing is the clank of the balls passing into the large wheel. They pass off without the least noise, no one knowing their departure until they strike the target at a distance. The experiment yesterday was a complete success, and its operations justify the assertion that for the purpose of putting down a street mob no implement has been invented its equal. No band of desperadoes could stand many minutes before an incessant fire of almost five hundred balls per minute. The same inventor has a thirty-two-pounder on the principle of the gun completed. The machinery works by means of steam, and will throw fully as many balls as the small gun.

The inventor of this wonderful implement of war is one McCarty. He has spent some ten years upon the project and has finally obtained a gun that bids fair to do all that his wildest dreams pictured to him. They are manufactured by J. Colwell, No. 340 West Twenty-seventh street, who can make several per week. A person connected with the establishment intends to visit Washington the first of next week and urge the war Department to try one of them. Several of the officers of regiments forming in the city witnessed the operation of the gun yesterday, and I understand that McCarty intends to take one for his regiment. It is really one of the wonders of the day, and if on future trials it sustains its yesterday's effort, it cannot fail to become a powerful and useful weapon of warfare.

WHAT IT WILL COST.—Some one went into a calculation of what the civil war would cost per month, and thought he had completed the task when he totted up the pay of the militia. But it will be impossible to estimate the sacrifice which is to be made. For the 75,000 troops which President Lincoln called out, the cost is set down as follows:—Colonel, per month, $218; Lieut. Colonel, $194; Major, $175; Captain, $118 50; First Lieutenant, $108 50; Second Lieutenant, $103 50; Brevet Second Lieutenant, $103 50; First or Orderly Sergeant, $29; or Sergeant, $27; Corporals, $22; Privates, $20; Musicians, $22. And the total, including rations, are set down at $1,000,000 per month. Since that time 42,000 more troops have been asked for, so that the monthly cost will be nearer $1,700,000 per month—and this for the North only. When the belligerents get fully at their work, and destruction, waste and riot el in their own, $1,000,000 a week will not suffice to compensate the loss direct. What the indirect loss to trade and manufactures may amount to, it is frightful to contemplate.

FRESH WATER SPRING AT SEA.—A fresh water spring has been discovered at sea, about eight miles off the coast of St. Augustine, Fla., which boils up with such force as to be seen two miles off, and has generally been mistaken for a breaker. It is pure fresh water, and ships have lately supplied themselves from it by throwing over a bucket.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—DEANGED STOMACH.—Our comfort, happiness, and security, depend on the knowledge that most diseases originate by apparently a trifling beginning, and the large portion of them spring from indigestion to the state of the stomach. Professor Holloway has turned his knowledge to useful account by discovering medicines which are, without exception, the best remedies for disordered digestion. They "lard off" the torturing sick headache. The Ointment should be well rubbed, twice daily, over the stomach, liver, and bowels, to them it penetrates, and, aided by the Pills, immediately works such a revolution as establishes perfect digestion.

Who has Charge of the Jail?
The question is not merely who has charge of the jail, but who ought to have charge of it? Everywhere but in our puzzling governmental latitude, the Sheriff keeps the keys. He, his deputy, or turnkeys, lock and unlock the institution, and safely keep or discharge the inmates according to the decrees of the courts. The sheriff is the responsible party, and responsible for those under him in his department. But the way in which things are managed here he is irresponsible. He neither keeps the keys, appoints the jailer, nor engages the turnkeys. If a prisoner escapes, the sheriff—lucky man—is not responsible. And it is somewhat doubtful whether any one is legally responsible. The Police Commissioner has charge of the institution. But how he has managed to get it puzzles us considerably. It may be by a rule of exceptions; for if any where else no exceptions can be found to general governmental rules, it is almost certain that they can be found here.
We regard the anomalous position both of the Sheriff and the Police Commissioner in respect to the Jail as an exception to all general rules. And till we are enlightened on the subject will conclude that the Sheriff is not practically responsible for the inmates of the jail, although the English common and statute law may be entirely in favor of him being both theoretically and practically responsible for the management of the institution. We confess, likewise, that we are at fault to discover how the Police Commissioner can be made responsible, although he nominally bears all the responsibilities. Where municipal institutions exist, there are such things as lock-ups, in which the police cage the incorrigible temporarily, till they are either acquitted summarily, or handed over to a higher power. We are half inclined to believe that our jail, whilst it remains under the control of the Police Commissioner, can only be regarded as a lock-up. Yet that useful functionary not only exercises towards the lock-up the functions of a Police Judge, but those of Sheriff, and Keeper of a House of Correction or Penitentiary. Whence the authority is derived for such different duties being centered in one man is a puzzle. If there be any at all except that might be right, we should like to know it. If there is none, we are disposed to favor the old-fashioned English idea of saddling the Sheriff with the responsibilities.

We would very much like to know who would be responsible for the debt in case a debtor escaped, or even if he was let out by the jailer? The sheriff could plead that he was never allowed to have control of a prisoner except to conduct him to the prison, which was kept by the Police Judge; consequently the Police Judge is responsible—look to him. But the creditor may reply, "I find no law which allows that functionary to take charge of the common jail. The law imposes the responsibility on the sheriff; hence I hold you responsible for the debt." Such, so far as we can understand the question, is really the way the matter stands. But what recourse has the sheriff?
If in the infancy of the Colony it is deemed desirable to merge the jail, lock-up, penitentiary, or house of correction, in one, and denude the sheriff of some of his authority, by all means let it be done, but let it be done legally. How it can be effected, however, without an act of the Legislature it is impossible to see, and yet it is done, has been done for three years certain, and is done daily. There is a time when the rule of exceptions or temporary necessity itself should give way to the ordinary and regular usages of Englishmen; and we see no good reason why we should preserve the jail any longer as an exception.

Convict Labor.
Yesterday the chain-gang was sent to work on Store street to open that thoroughfare to the Rock Bay bridge. The convicts composing the gang are supported out of the colonial revenue, and their employment on this road, to the exclusion of respectable citizens, we consider, to say the least, a highly improper movement. There are many men among us who are at present lying idle for the want of the very kind of employment to which these convicts have been put, and who would be glad to labor on the road indicated at the customary rate of wages; but are debarred from earning a livelihood here because convict labor is found to be cheapest. We have ever opposed the introduction of prison laborers to the exclusion of citizens, where there is the least chance of avoiding the innovation. True, the prisoners must not be left to idle away their time—they must be rendered self-supporting whenever and wherever it can be done without clashing with the interests of the public; or taking the bread out of the mouths of respectable citizens. There are many employments to which the long-time men might be placed without coming at all in contact with citizens, and to those employments they should be strictly kept. We can never hope to build up a prosperous Colony so long as the preference in such jobs is given to convicts to the exclusion of others. The very class of men we stand most in need of in a new country come here, take a look around and see how matters stand—find that there is no protection for their class—and shake the dust of the Colony from their feet, thoroughly disgusted with the aspect of affairs; and their reports will keep others away.

The constant cry here is, we want population, and yet we find the Government every day pursuing a course that tends to drive population off. It is said that in this case, several gentlemen who are deeply interested, in a pecuniary sense of view, in the removal of the old bridge and the construction of the new ones, have furnished the convicts with the necessary tools, and that Mr. Pemberton has furnished the labor at the expense of the colony! We have somehow obtained the impression that the whole of the work connected with the new bridges, the taking down of the old one, laying out of roads, etc.—everything, in fact, connected with the improvement—was to have been performed without the cost of a single farthing to the Colony. Our impression may be a wrong one, and if so, we should be most happy to be set right in the matter. But, at any rate, let us endeavor to afford the laboring men at present in our midst a chance to earn a livelihood. If there were none of the class to be found here, we should not object to the convicts, but so long as these are a single respectable, industrious man, able and willing to take the job at fair, living wages, let him have the first show.

600 MEN REPORTED ON THE WAY DOWN.

The sloop Sherman, Whitford master, arrived from New Westminster last night. She left that port on Wednesday.

The steamer Gov. Douglas has gone up the river. The Otter had passed on to Langley to leave some cattle.

Fare on the up-river steamboats to Yale is now $7 for each passenger. So much for combination.

Capt. Whitford has kindly handed us a copy of the British Columbian, from which we condense the following items:

Provisions are very scarce at Antler Creek. It is feared the miners will suffer from want if supplies are not rushed up.

Three pack-trains were in at Yale on the 18th. Two others were on the way down.

Wm. Humphrey has commenced the manufacture of bricks at Yale.

P. Smith, of Douglas, arrived at New Westminster on Tuesday. He reports about 600 miners on the way down from Cariboo, who have not left for want of good diggings, but on account of the great scarcity of provisions.

Gov. Douglas and suite arrived at Douglas from Cayoosh on Friday of last week.

Capt. Torrens is reported to have been appointed magistrate at Cayoosh.

Bishop Hills is at Cayoosh.

On Antler Creek recently, two men took out $400 in one day, and a company of four took out $600 to the crowd.

PETITION FOR A SUBSIDY.—A petition has been circulated in town for the past few days praying Her Majesty's Government to subsidize a line of mail steamers, to run between this port and San Francisco direct—that is, to throw off Portland entirely. There is no question but if we had had direct steam communication with San Francisco last spring, many more miners would have found their way into the country than finally reached here. The growing importance of Victoria—the rich mineral resources of the sister colony, upon which we are dependent for our prosperity demands that exertion should be put forth to secure direct steam communication. We have many times urged the propriety of our citizens declaring their independence of the California steamers, by building a suitable boat of their own; but as no steps have been taken to that end, the next best thing they can do is to call at Mr. Drake's office to-day and affix their signatures to the petition. It will remain in Mr. D.'s charge until the departure of the next steamer, when it will be forwarded to Downing street. May good luck go with it!

ON DIT.—That the Hudson Bay Company's representatives here are disinclined to allow the Attorney-General to back out from his purchase of the Springs; and that the latter feels very much like the man who brought the elephant—now that he has got the property he doesn't know what to do with it. That the H. B. C. still claim to have possessed the right to dispose of the People's water; and that having succeeded in finding a purchaser at a good round sum, they do not feel willingly to let him slip through their fingers without a severe struggle. Also, that the lots advertised for sale on the 4th of the present month, and postponed till the decision of the Court in the injunction suit was given, will shortly be offered by auction. Fine field for lawyers, this!

VICTORIA LIME DEPOT.—We acknowledge the receipt of a number of specimens of fine lime from the Stephen's Victoria Lime Depot, Yates street. His lime is obtained near Skinner's farm, on this Island and is claimed, although not of as light color as that from San Juan, to possess great strength and to be equally well adapted for fine as well as rough work.

FROM PORT TOWNSEND.—The steaming Resolute arrived from Port Townsend yesterday morning, for the purpose of taking in tow the hulk of the Northern Eagle, recently purchased by the Port Madison Mill Co. The hulk will be converted into a barkentine and rigged similarly to the W. B. Seranton, one of the numerous fast-sailing vessels plying between this port and San Francisco.

THE ASSAULT CASE.—Wm. Smith appeared in Court yesterday to answer a charge of assaulting a boy named James Estall. A witness proved that he heard the lad call Smith bad names and strike at him. In answer to a question from the magistrate, Estall said he didn't mean to hurt accused. Charge dismissed with costs on complaint.

THE BARK "GLIMPSE."—This bark is said, by the Port Townsend Northwest, to have left Port Ludlow on the 17th inst. for San Francisco. A schooner which arrived here on Thursday reports having met her on the same day in the Straits bound down with maintop royal mast gone; weather squally.

MAKING A ROAD.—The chain-gang yesterday commenced to grade the road from Store street to the commencement of Rock Bay bridge.

Gov. Douglas is expected this evening from British Columbia.

Auction Sales.

At the warehouse of Stewart, Meldrum & Co., this morning, at 11 o'clock, Mr. McCrea will sell crockeryware, Old Tom, liquors, wine, harness, meershaum pipes, fancy goods, an iron house, &c., &c.

Mr. Backus will sell at his salesroom, at 11 o'clock to-day, a large assortment of household furniture, an American mare, and the store recently occupied by Thos. Phelan, Yates street.

WASSERMAN VS. DAVISON.—In this case yesterday, Mr. Cary for the plaintiff, asked leave to amend by withdrawing demurrer and replying to defendant's plea. Mr. McCraith and Mr. Ring showed cause why leave should not be granted, and Court reserved decision.

FOR BUTE INLET.—A party of three white men, accompanied by Indians, left yesterday in a canoe for Bute Inlet for the purpose of exploring the coast route. They calculate making the trip—a distance of two hundred miles—in four days.

CRICKET MATCH.—A match between the Victoria and Fleet Cricket Clubs will be played to-day—commencing at noon. Refreshments may be obtained on the ground.

The steam-tug Resolute yesterday made a fruitless effort to tow the hulk of the Northern Eagle out of the harbor. If the wind is light to-day, she will probably succeed in getting her out.

We learn that the guns of the Massachusetts have been "sharp loaded" since the recent return of Capt. Fauntleroy from San Francisco. The reason of this precaution we do not understand—nor is it necessary that we should, as we are not attached to the War Department.—Northwest.

Newfoundland and Her Fisheries.

The Newfoundland Royal Gazette of the 2nd ult. contains a dispatch from the Colonial Secretary to Sir Alexander Bannerman, of which the paragraphs here cited are the most important.

It is plain that the responsibility of securing the French Fishermen the free exercise of every right guaranteed to them by existing Treaties rests on the British Government which made those treaties. This obligation they cannot transfer to the Colony of Newfoundland, but are bound themselves to discharge frankly and effectually. Subject to that obligation, her Majesty's Government are most anxious, not only to protect and advance the interests of Newfoundland, but, in all local questions, to ascertain, and, as far as possible, defer to the wishes of the Colonists.

The Convention now proposed has not for its object in any way to enlarge the "Maritime or Territorial rights" of France, or to abridge those of Newfoundland, but primarily and almost exclusively to provide a machinery capable of securing that the just rights of each party under the existing Treaties shall be respected by the other.

The comparatively unimportant causes of the Convention which have not this object, contain provisions which will confer material advantages on some of the inhabitants of Newfoundland, and embrace nothing which in the opinion of her Majesty's Government falls within the spirit of Mr. Labouchere's promise, which was not lost sight of by them throughout the protracted negotiations with the French Government.

I make these observations to prevent misconception. But I do not anticipate that the provisions of the Convention will be considered by the community of Newfoundland, and more than they are by her Majesty's Government, either as injurious to their interests or as involving such modification of their rights as was contemplated in Mr. Labouchere's dispatch. I regret much that it is not in my power at once to authorize you to communicate a copy of that Convention to the Government and Legislature of the Colony.

M. Du Chailu, African Traveler.

At a meeting of the members of the Royal Institution and their friends (including a large number of distinguished persons) expressly assembled for the purpose (Sir Roderick L. Marchion in the chair), M. Du Chailu gave an account of his travels in the interior of Western Africa, comprising an extent of about four hundred miles, from 2 deg. N. to 2 deg. S. He started from the mouth of the Gaboon River, and made five distinct journeys into the interior, in the course of three years (1855-9), during which he studied the physical features of the country and the manners of the inhabitants. Amid the beautiful tropical vegetation dwelt ferocious beasts, and no less fierce human beings. The further inward he went the more intelligent he found the people. The cloth woven of grass was finer, and their pottery and weapons of war better made. Some are cannibals of the very worst kind. Natural death they do not appear to believe in. When they see it drawing near, they kill the sick and aged; and when a person dies, another, to whom they attribute the cause of death, must be killed. No persons but kings and others of high rank are buried; the corpses are eaten, human flesh being sold in the shambles. Among one tribe, M. du Chailu was honored as a king and worshipped as a spirit. The people believed that the cloth, &c., he gave them were made by him in the night, and that his clock and musical box were devils.

M. Du Chailu gave also a particular account of the gorilla apes, which, in some parts of their structure, approach nearer to man than any other animal. He had met many in the forest regions on the banks of the Mani River and between the Gaboon and Cape Lopez. The strongly-marked features and large, deep sunken eyeballs, especially in the males, give them an appearance of the most intense ferocity. The traveller's description of his first encounter with this monster, before whom all the beasts fly, was very remarkable. It occurred in the midst of a gloomy forest. The monster came on slowly to the attack, bearing his huge heavy chest, displaying his enormously strong teeth, and uttering a terrific roar.

"Now," said the traveler to himself, "if you wish to see your friends again you will take good aim." He did so, and the monster fell. Afterwards he killed twenty gorillas. One of his companions unfortunately missed his aim and was torn to pieces by a gorilla, who even crushed his gun with his powerful tusks. The gorilla is unsamable, M. du Chailu having tried in vain to domesticate a young one. The gorilla does not, as has been said, erect a shelter for itself. At night the female ascends a tree and the male rests below. These animals resemble men in living in some way in the family state. Their scanty means of support (they being vegetarians, living mostly on berries) will ever prevent their being very numerous. In the stomach of a very aged one, whose teeth were worn out, nothing was found but leaves. Several specimens of the gorilla, and drawings and maps illustrated M. Du Chailu's most interesting narrative. His book, now in the press, will be anxiously looked for.

ALMOST A CONFLAGRATION.—On Monday afternoon at about 3 o'clock, the house formerly occupied by Dr. McCurdy, as a residence, took fire from the slipping of the stove-pipe, and soon fanned into a blaze. Fortunately, Capt. J. R. Townsend was passing near the spot, and discovered it in time to save a very general conflagration. We have thus far escaped the dire plague of fire, but our citizens cannot be too careful in guarding against such contingency.—P. T. Northwest.

THE MORRILL TARIFF.—The New York Times calls the present tariff "a revenue that beggars the public treasury, one which no branch of industry requires and no State asks, unless it be one of the middle States, that never failed to repudiate such a statute and its friends at the ballot box whenever it had a chance. Will a cordon of Customs' officers equal in numbers, and as intent in bloody purpose as any that Spain ever launched against contraband traffic, be able by force to check or turn the natural courses of the domestic and foreign trade of the American people?"

FRENCH TREATMENT OF CROUP.—A paper on this dangerous malady was lately communicated to the French Academy of Sciences by Dr. Ozanan, who has devoted especial attention to this disease since 1849, and has made a great number of experiments with chemical agents in treating it. It is stated in a report of his paper that the chloride of potassium dissolves the false membrane in the throat in the course of twenty-four hours; chloride of sodium dissolves it in thirty-six hours; a solution of bromide potassium (1 part to 89 of water) dissolves it in twelve hours, and glycerine has the effect of softening it in twenty-four hours. Dr. Ozanan prefers alkalies as dissolvents in treating croup, but he quotes a peculiar case of successful treatment with a solution of common salt. A country physician in France, in 1860, while attempting to cauterize the throat of a patient with a stick of caustic, to his great dismay found the caustic sucked out of his fingers and swallowed. In terror, he hastily prepared a strong solution of common salt as an antidote to counteract the effects of the poison, when, to his surprise, it not only effected this object, but cured the croup also.
